WE, THE CLASS OF JUNE, 1937, MOST GRATEFULLY DEDICATE THIS BOOK TO KURT A. ZIMMERMANN, WHO HAS UNRESERVEDLY EARNED OUR EVER-LASTING ADMIRATION AND FRIENDSHIP THROUGH HIS UNTIRING ENCOURAGEMENT, LOYALTY, AND INSPIRATION.

Kurt A. Zimmermann

Dear Class of June 1937:

We are about to separate, you and I, after four years of earnest work and fellowship. You are leaving our beloved Alma Mater to enter upon new pathways of experience and adventure. May the paths lead to happiness and worth-while achievements.

Earnestly work out your own destiny. Give forth the best that is in you, and have faith to believe that the best will come back to you. Thus you will help to make the world a finer place because you have lived in it.

With faith and pride in you, one and all,

Kurt A. Zimmermann

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE SESQUI-CENTENNIAL CLASS OF
ERASMUS HALL:

Heartiest greetings to you all and congratulations upon your success.

As you are graduated this June,
Erasmus Hall completes one century and a half of service for the youth of our land. The faith, the vision, and the sacrifices of those who in 1786 established this school and of those who through the years have supported it have been justified in its long record of useful service.

We hope that your four years here have developed your powers of mind, that you have come to a fuller knowledge of people and to a greater maturity of personality and of character.
You face a world uncertain of its purpose, sceptical of many beliefs that guided our fathers, torn by conflicting ideas, fearful of impending disaster. Unable or unwilling to think for themselves, too many men are swept along in mass thinking and in mass action. The abdication of personal responsibility and the flight for refuge to the authoritarian dictatorship of tyrannical individuals or of groups constitute a danger to that democracy which we believe to be the best way of life.

As you go out from school, may I impress upon you individually your responsibility to think for yourselves and to work fearlessly for the right.
If democracy is to survive and if civilization is to advance, the good citizen must be prepared and willing to do his part in solving the problems facing us today.

OH, LADS AND LASSIES

Oh, lads and lassies, one and all,
Come join us in a song
Of endless fame for the dear old name
Of old Erasmus Hall.
Then flash with living fire each dauntless eye
As we view thy vine clad walls.
Within thy well loved halls.
high
Within thy well loved halls.

Chorus

Erasmus Hall, thy colors bright
To ev'ry breeze unfurled,
Are starred with gleams of golden light
With joyous hopes empearled.
The Blue's the hue of Brave and True
The tender Buff's the shade of dawn,
That tells the splendid years to come
When youth's fair dreams are gone.

II

As Mecca loved by Moslem bands
Our hearts to thee do turn.
As calm and tranquil ever stands
This theme for song and pen.
While ardent love of thee runs through our veins,
We'll sing thy wondrous pow'r.
While firm affection ever gains,
No clouds about it lower.

PAN AM

BEING CANDID

T H E S T A T U E S P E A K S

The quiet breeze sifted the sand on the back campus. The statue of Erasmus read on in a depth of silence, unbroken save for the daring chatter of nomad sparrows. The newborn grass stirred daintily with the warm air of summer. It was June.

From a cool, dark lair within the stately Old Building a hermit cricket chirped suddenly, breaking the soft stillness. A lone young man, dreaming near the base of the reader's pedestal, awoke from his happy soliloquy. His eager young face peered questioningly at the rugged outlines of the old statue.

A peculiar rustle, as of time-worn raiment, whispered past the graduate's ear. As if this phenomenon were to be expected, the youth folded his hands, and noiselessly seated his figure upon the sun-lit pedestal.

A low voice, calm, yet filled with ageless wisdom, pulsated from the kindly lips of the statue.

"You see, many have left this building with undaunted stride and determined hearts. I have seen them broken on the wheel of life, sacrificing their once precious ideals. When you go forth, you carry with you my ever-proud name. I have borne it untouched by petty meanness or low cowardice. With you goes forth a great banner, one of noble spirit, of knowledge, and of courage, to wave majestically amidst the turmoiled winds in the battle which you face. You are an Erasmian.

"Your victory lies within you. It is only within your heart that your goal can be attained. When you write your fate upon the book of judgment, let your soul be proud. Remember, when the sun is lowest, even a small man may cast a long shadow. Life can never conquer a tenacious ideal."

The low tones subsided into the murmur of the leaves. Once more all was still. The young man rose, smiled, and made his way out into the busy street.

"I guess it was all written within my heart," he explained to himself.

But the statue seemed to smile contentedly, while a stray band of sunlight softened its time-worn features.

REMINISCENCES

"Wheredayathink yur goin, huh?", growled a service squadder as he crouched menacingly at the top of a "down" staircase. "Cantcha read orya freshman?", he queried in a deep bass voice (a deep bass is a requirement for all squadsmen). We tried to explain to him that the staircase had been "up" the period before. When we finished, his face turned purple as he tried to untangle his tongue which could not keep pace with his utterances. Before he became totally asphyxiated, one of his cohorts, who was wearing more badges than he, plopped down beside him and resoundingly thumped him on the back. Then they both went into a huddle and became very mysterious and sinister.

After we had waited an eternity in the middle of the flight of stairs, the service squadder, the locker captain, and the arch-patrol captain, all in the person of this second individual, glowered at us and rumbled, also in a bass voice, "You are charged with destroying school property, using the wrong staircase, disturbing the peace, and attempting assault. Gimme your program!"

That afternoon was spent in Room 114. Detention is a very usual occurrence for some people, and different habitués adopt different philosophies toward it. Some students find that the detention hall is the only place where they can finish their homework. Other students recognize it as a place to brood. Still others feel that 114 is invaluable in so far as peace and quiet are concerned. They maintain that the desk is very conducive to sleep and that rest thus obtained is soul-satisfying.

"Got the math homework?"

"No!"

"Got the chem homework?"

"Naw, I forgot to copy it."

"Gee, I'm tired."

"Me too. Good-night!"

(Voice in the distance, said with finality.)

"Good-night!!!"

And our thoughts wandered out of Room 114 and back along the path of time. We found ourselves as freshmen in the Annex, where boys were boys and girls still ate with their fingers.

While sophomores took their exercise sliding across the back campus and swinging in "out" exits, we got ours jumping on trolleys going to the Annex, wading our way through its muddy surroundings, and lugging our overflowing briefcases, remnants of the elementary school days. Nevertheless, despite our physical resemblance to monkeys, we were very quaint. For example: it is doubtful whether anybody ever saw a monkey wearing horn rimmed glasses or smiling with two missing front teeth. Notwithstanding, the faculty tried to teach us English, French, algebra, and civics, as against our preference for gym, quiet period, lunch, and dismissal.

It has often been said that the first four years in high school are the hardest, but one is apt to shiver and shake, just a little more, when he recalls his freshman term in the main building. Before we left the Annex, the teachers cautioned us against Erasmians in general and upper-classmen in particular. But a few did not heed their warnings. Consequently, thirteen chapel seats and twenty-one gym spots were sold to gullible freshies.

Although the girls would be the first to deny it, the second year was the Cave Man Era. We sophomores used to wander around drawing pictures and carving initials. The desk top appealed directly to us as a place to scrawl our names or a couple of wise-cracks. The fact that the desk top was never changed added to its bill-board lure. A name scratched deep enough would live there for ages. The most popular motif seemed to have been, "Here lie those who died waiting for the bell to ring!"

Since a cave man without a cave is like a ship without a sail, we were given the locker room and all the passages that went with it. These passageways took the form of tunnels, and students were known to take a short cut through one of them the first period, and not come out again until the fifth. It once was suggested to map the various routes and thus facilitate travel, but student opinion stated that such an act would dim the romance of exploration and conquest.

In that merry age of late passes, subways, detention, chapel seats, safety pins, and algebra, we came upon the noisiest bi-annual affair of all, the G. O. elections. Nine candidates vied for office, and woe betide him who stood in the way. He was crushed by an avalanche of tags and strings. He was deluged with thousands of blotters, and deafened by hundreds of horns. His button-holes were jammed full of papers, while green crepe flowers wiggled from his lapel. If the person happened to be a girl, she would be weighed down by placards which advertised, "No more homework, a dance orchestra in the lunch room, every day a holiday, and motion pictures in study halls."

Then in the third year came the full day session, and with it the Dark Ages. We started out for school in the dark and we arrived home in the dark. Furthermore, we had dark rings beneath our eyes and around our shirt cuffs.

Notwithstanding those blotches, we grew up. Abridged pants stretched to trousers, and the girls twirled their pigtails into very attractive braids. Few finger nails were chewed that year and silver rimmed glasses replaced the heavy celluloid ones. Now that we were more mature, we no longer brought our lunch to school. Instead we tripped down to the lunch room and made a dash for a table. Whoever got there first could save as many as seven tables, and the entire room was sometimes overflowing with ten people. If we arrived sufficiently early, the line waiting for service would only be a block long. Sometimes, however, the line got stuck ahead of us, and we would eat our meals while we waited. Then we had to remember what we had eaten in order to pay the cashier.

We learned that singing was not always confined to bathroom showers. One was able to hear much louder vocalizing in the boys' gym lockers. The reason may have been that one could arrange a quartet in a locker room with greater ease than in a bathtub. In order to get on and remain on a quartet, a yodeler could be either big or good. If he were big, he could take care of himself, and if he were good, he would be allowed to sing. Nevertheless, sneakers were known to fly for much less than a sour note.

While "The Music Goes Round and Round" was still the rage, we held our first prom. Many of us had just learned how to dance, and we could not wait to step on one another's toes. Yet, when it came time to go on the floor, only three courageous couples stepped out and danced the "Box Step." The other timid souls enviably watched.

In the succeeding terms, though, we found that there were many variations of the "Three Step." We learned how to "Peabody" and "Truck It Down." It developed that we looked forward to hops as social events rather than social ordeals. There were times, however, when it was a case of the survival of the fittest. That was the period when lolly pops were given out. Then it was every man for himself and the devil take the sucker.

As our sixth term drew to a close, we became conspicuous. A few students, especially, came to the notice of everyone, but they could not help it. You see, they dressed in bright plaid shirts and white starched collars, checkered coats and trousers, and black and white shoes. "Sharpies," we called them.

In passing from our third year, a few remarks should be made about the girls. They possessed a vanity that would have put Cleopatra to shame. If you had strolled through the locker rooms, the ones in the Old Building, we mean, you would have found yourself surrounded by mirrors fastened on the inside of the doors of their lockers by adhesive tape. Dressing rooms in miniature were displayed, while the admiring females could be seen combing their hair and powdering their noses in front of them. Even the boys' lockers reflected the vanity of their occupants. They equipped their lockers with electric lights, the current being furnished by storage batteries.

Whee! We were entering our fourth year. That was the autumn of '36. We were found everywhere, in the Quadrangle, in detention, and slaving in the classrooms. In the "Erasmian" office the editors were discovered doing Latin homework. In the "Dutchman" office the page editors and the faculty advisers were eating dinner while the headlines were being composed. The Footlighters were teaching a new villain to snarl. The Year Book staff was degenerating into a debating society. The Senate was arguing about "knocks and boosts" in the Year Book.

In the eighth term the seniors were melancholy. They wanted to leave Erasmus Hall and yet they did not want to leave. Parting was being such sweet sorrow. The upper-classmen appeared to vary with the weather, and at times they would approach a fellow-graduate-to-be and announce darkly, "I'm matriculating."

"Don't touch it! You'll get it dirty," said the girl as she folded the third page of her college application blank. "See what you've done now with your dirty old hands? You've messed Form S and Forms X, Y, and Z are so much cleaner. Oh, now they won't let me into college and it will be all your fault! Do go away! You have already smudged my character rating."

One day in our last year the incinerator started to flame and the school was cleared of students. Fire engines drove onto the campus and burly firemen dragged a sinewy hose up three flights of stairs. Heroic teachers threw coats out of the windows to warm the chilly students. Freshmen quivered and seniors told them to buck up. Girls snickered and the boys watched, engrossed. Then the blaze was extinguished. The firefighters left.

The flagpole had supplanted the ancient statue of Erasmus as a meeting place. The cause of this was the little flower garden that was struggling for an existence at its base. The year before seeds had been planted in four square boxes surrounding the pole. They had been nursed and watered, but as soon as the sprouts saw daylight, they invariably lay down and died. This created quite a stir among the students, and little groups began to gather around the garden to cheer the lingering sprigs. Thus, the flagpole became the new meeting place.

Now as we wake up in the middle of the night for Senior Singing, we realize that Commencement is not far off and that nothing can stop us except the English regents. So the Class of June, 1937 will leave, secure in the knowledge that it has perpetuated the spirit of Erasmus Hall.

HISTORY

WHEN WE WERE ONE:

"Annex Dotes and Deeds" was the title of our "Dutchman" column—it was the first time that freshmen had broken through the ominous press board in the main building—and we were inordinately proud. Alla Shainin wrote languorous descriptive passages about her childhood in China, and Ruth Sacks wrote about "The Ancient Mariner." Remember? Leo Bogart filled it full of guppies and tadpoles and prowling cats. Marcia Heatter told about winning the Roosevelt Medal and how very much everybody liked Mr. Elbert. Tom Bennett was the Captain of the Guards (in short pants), and we even started a baseball team.

WHEN WE WERE TWO:

Mr. Zimmermann got up in Chapel and presented Tommy with a "Cooperation in Government" Medal. So that was Mr. Zimmermann! We got to know him in little bits, and the little bits began to grow and form even regular patterns; and it came to us suddenly that we were an extremely lucky eight hundred. We've thought so ever since. Herbert King and Helen Howard and Alla Shainin were Boy and Girl Leader and Secretary of Junior Arista, and we were rather glad we hadn't bought those gym spots they had offered us in the very beginning.

WHEN WE WERE THREE:

We had what they called Afternoon Session, or "The Blight," and we—us—our grade, formed the first four afternoon clubs: Thespians, Speech Club, Bios Logos, and Les Cadets de Sans Souci. Our very own Grade Adviser was in complete charge of the building during those twilight hours, and when we used to sneak up behind him and yell "Miss Hodgdon," well—nobody minded very much. We were such nice, whimsical sophomores.

WHEN WE WERE FOUR:

We formed the Effodians. It was just a little bit of a thing then, but interest and Mr. Israel have watched it progress swimmingly ever since. Charlotte Feldman received her first Math award that term; and after that it just rained honors in Dr. Wedeck's division. We seem to remember Marie Meisel, very eloquent, winning the French Declamation Contest, side by side with Ralph Campanale and his awards in Spanish.

WHEN WE WERE FIVE:

We came into our own. We watched 12 proud ones be initiated into the Senior Arista. Remember their solemn faces in the "Dutchman"? We had a slam bang Jinx

Party, the first dance sponsored by Grade Fivers in history. "Jimmy" was wont to say of his brood: "My, but I have some extraordinary infants."

WHEN WE WERE SIX:

We had our Junior Prom. Remember Gerry Passaro doing a Spanish dance and luring the people? Wasn't that the term that we discovered that Herbert Fوسفeld

G. O. Officers

Sr. Class Officers

Senior Arista

had been holding out on us. Tom Bennett and Alla Shainin were elected to Student Council. Robert Levine promised Mr. Zimmerman an ice cream soda if he won an award in the New York Classical Club Contest. Bob got $50, but "Zimmy" is still waiting. The Shainin whiz won a city-wide vocabulary test in Latin. We realized suddenly that in two months we were going to be seniors.

WHEN WE WERE SEVEN

We took over the "Dutchman" and the "Erasmian" altogether. Ted Goodchild edited our journalistic offering; and Marcia Heatter headed the Erasmian staff. G. O. elections were fast and furious. We appreciated Jerry Blumberg, Elaine Pear, and Helen Howard after the hubbub and the shouting. Allan Nanes won a huge current events bee. Senior Arista was suddenly in our hands.

Bill Homan, Alla Shainin, and Rickie Brown were doing nicely, thank you. Oscar Brand was elected president, not only of the school organization, but of the Boro Council of Pan-American Clubs. Lest we forget the Arch Patrol, remember Al Napoli's superlative job? Lester McPherson was busy with the Service Squad.

WHEN WE WERE EIGHT:

The new Old Building stood out in all its glory, jokes about the P.W.A. workers having gone their way. The new walk across the Campus shone brightly in all its granite elegance after our noble G. O. President had christened it with the aid of a speech and the track team. Elaine Pear edited the Erasmian. We had another and final election. Tom Bennett, Muriel Goodman, and Alla Shainin were our Senior Class Officers.

It was spring. The campus was in bloom. The grass was green and wet and sweet, the chapel dim and still. Desiderius read his iron words as we passed slowly through the arch with measured tread.

Senility? No, rather the beginning.

S P O R T S

Erasmus Hall, the school that has given the sporting world such names as Waite Hoyt and Eleanor Holm Jarrett, graduates this year a fine array of potential athletic talent. Let us train our spotlight on the past four years at Erasmus Hall and recall to our minds some of the sporting highlights that have helped to make our stay at this Old Gray School a series of happy remembrances.

The majority of the class was assigned to the Annex, which seemed at this time to be the farthest outpost of civilization. We had little chance to participate in school athletics and therefore contented ourselves with our intramural games. The boys won their numerals and the girls became hockey and basketball players. However, in the meantime, there were big doings at the main building! The football team, which in 1932 had had to share the football city championship with Theodore Roosevelt High School, was determined to again reach the top. They captured the Brooklyn Championship without much trouble, but then went down in the city championship playoff to Flushing High School. Sid Luckman dashed 75 yards to a touchdown in the first quarter, all to no avail. The swimming team, riding on the crest of sixteen consecutive victories, annexed the Brooklyn championship and then sank before the city champion, the Far Rockaway team, at Columbia Pool.

In February we entered the main building. We appeared as very green Freshmen and were treated accordingly by the upper classmen. We confined our athletic activities to cheering the exceptionally fine teams that the Erasmus coaches were turning out. We watched our Lacrosse team win its first city championship by trouncing our old rival, Manual. Mr. Badain's basketeers performed well and managed to gain ten victories.

WITH THE CLASS OF JUNE, 1937, GRADUATE A NUMBER OF GIRLS WHO HAVE BEEN MOST ACTIVE IN THE WORK OF THE LEADERS CLUB, DURING THEIR STAY IN ERASMUS HALL.

ARISTA MEMBER WARREN WEITMAN HAS MAINTAINED A HIGH SCHOLASTIC STANDING IN ADDITION TO SERVING AS CAPTAIN OF THE TRACK TEAM AND LEADING THE CINDER-TREADERS MOST SUCCESSFULLY.

The class of June '37 marched on! The fairer sex had become quite expert at the game of field hockey which they practiced each Saturday at Prospect Park. An all school hockey team challenged Packer Institute and amazed everyone but themselves by coming out on the long end of a 2-0 decision. Helen Hines gained the hockey captaincy of our grade. The football team was not as impressive as that of the preceding year. The team was trounced by Madison and played two scoreless ties with Manual. The swimming team enjoyed another successful season. They again won the Brooklyn Championship only to go down in the city wide title race, this time defeated by Richmond Hill. The Erasmus cagemen had a successful season. They failed to win the Brooklyn crown which many experts had predicted would be theirs.

We were now sophisticated upper sophomores. We watched a new team arise upon the Erasmus sport horizon, the fencing squad. The team battled through Brooklyn opposition and was acclaimed uncrowned champion. The tennis team made a good showing in P.S.A.L. ranks.

A new sporting era dawned at Erasmus! Previous to this time Erasmian teams had won one city championship and had been runner up no less than four times since our class had entered the school. The football team went through one of the most disastrous seasons in its history. The basketeers, hampered by unusually small players, compiled a record of two victories and eight defeats. The swimming team, however, broke the jinx by winning the Brooklyn Championship for the fourth time in a row and then went on to share the city crown with George Washington High School.

The girls next elected Dorothy Benjamin as their baseball captain and Eleanor La Sasso their basketball captain. Inga Olsen became the first female member of the class to pass her Senior Life Saving Tests. Fencing was temporarily banned by the P.S.A.L. board.

The dismal era ended. We entered upon the year I A.D. of the new Erasmus Hall sports calendar. Our class girls hockey team trounced the Brooklyn Collegians and also won the school championship. In the final game, Harriet Merrill saved the day by scoring the decisive goal. The gridgers were defeated only by Boys High who became the mythical city champions. The team defeated Madison and tied Manual. Our class had seen Manual beaten but once in football. Three games had ended in ties; one game was won by the Park Slopers. The mermen again won the Brooklyn Championship but went down to defeat at Columbia Pool. Our Brooklyn crown annexation marked the fifth consecutive time, and the ninth out of ten times, that we had won it. The basketball team ended its schedule in second place. Lincoln, the Brooklyn winner, split a pair of games with the Buff and Blue cagers. Ed Ehlers, co-captain and veteran campaigner, played his last game for Erasmus Hall.

Football next season will lose Wilson Korona, also a member of the baseball and swimming teams. Basketball will lose Ed Ehlers, veteran player, who has been either captain or co-captain for the last three years and who also plays outfield on the Buff and Blue nine. Bob Holm, a relative of Eleanor Holm, was one of the most improved players of last year's second place basketeters. Also graduating is Max Scharf, essentially a team player, whose presence will be sorely missed on next year's quintet. Frank Morton is a second year man who puts all of his height and fight into his center position. Harvey Goodrich was acclaimed one of the best defensive guards in Brooklyn two years ago. Other members graduating are Louis Tomasulo and Joe Shapiro. Dick Cunningham, Erasmus' top breast-stroker, finished third in the P.S.A.L. swim championship. Ray Frisch is a fine swimmer. Hal Lesselbaum is one of the team's better breast stroke. James Rafter, Arthur Holleb, George Heller, and William Montgomery are also leaving Erasmus Hall. The baseball team will do without the services of Bill Egan, one of the best pitchers in Buff and Blue ranks since the days of

CAPTAIN ED. EHLERS LEADS THE MEMBERS OF THE BASKETBALL TEAM WHO LEAVE THIS TERM. THE BOYS HAVE ENJOYED MOST SUCCESSFUL SEASONS DURING THE PAST SEVERAL YEARS.

Waite Hoyt. Jack Kennedy is the other half of the Egan battery. Jack has performed his catching duties nobly for the past two years. Coach Caldwell loses some of his best soccer booters in the graduation of Robert Bruno, Herbert Derman, "Jake" Welikson, and Frank Buffalano. Managers Murray Levitan and Charles Suber also leave. The tennis team will miss Joe Greenberg and Leonard Grindlinger, co-captains. Quentin Stodola was also on the tennis team. The track team will be without Captain Warren Weitman, a 220 runner and a main cog of the Buff and Blue's 880 relay team. Coach Larry Kraemer was moved to say of him, "Warren is a good runner and a good fellow." High praise for anyone! Phil Lombardi and Johnny Smith are two other members of the 880 relay team. Other members of the team are: Lester McPherson, Arthur Bohm, Robert Levine, and Irwin Fine. Captain Irwin Fine has run his last mile for the cross-country team. He has received five letters for track and cross-country. Peter Bender, one of our best lacrosse players, will be a loss to Coach Davis.

Harriet Merrill will be sorely missed by the girl swimmers and Helen Hines will be lost to tennis. Barbara Schwab has cracked out her last hit in girls' baseball. Jean Solow has shot her last basket, and Margaret Holden has prevented the last opposing team from shooting its goal. Three all-around athletes, Audrey Murphy, Dot Benjamin, and Claire London, will also be graduated. The Leaders' Club loses its three officers: Helen Hines, president, Harriet Merrill, vice-president, and Margaret Holden, secretary. The other members of the Leaders' Club who will graduate are: Estelle Zucker, Shirley Lawson, Muriel Maass, Jean Solow, Dot Benjamin, Roberta Kotcher, Beatrice Ott, Barbara Schwab, Elsie Larson, Margaret Finn, Claire London and Eleanor La Sasso.

The members of the class of June '37 who have taken part in athletics at Erasmus Hall during the past four years will long be remembered. The school bids them a proud farewell.

CLASS PROPHECY

As I ducked around the corner of the Old building near Exit 11, clutching my pass tightly in my fist as I endeavored to elude a pack of baying service squadders, I heard a soft "Hee-haw." Looking up, I discovered my old friend, the educated donkey, beckoning to me with his ears. Quickly I clambered up the snow-shed pillar and lay panting on the roof until the infuriated freshmen had disappeared.

"Well, they're gone," I observed. "Thanks."

"Don't mention it. Besides, that wasn't why I called you."

"What's the matter? The flies bothering you again?"

"No, it's not that," he giggled. "It's about the June '37 Yearbook. What are you going to do about a class prophecy?"

"About the same as usual. We've appointed a committee to call on Dessy and read his book. Every yearbook staff does that."

"Ah ha, there's where I've got you! Do you know who Dessy was? He was the foremost scholar of the Middle Ages, and he read only Latin. But I've heard Dr. Wedeck say that not one member of the Yearbook staff, let alone a committee, ever received over 30% in Latin! Can you rely on their translation?"

In consternation, I realized that he was right. "What can we do?" I faltered.

"Don't worry, that's just what I've called you for. I'll give you the class prophecy myself, straight from the horse's mouth, so to speak."

"But what would everyone say if our class prophecy were written by a jack . . . donkey?"

"Who usually writes it anyhow?" he glared belligerently.

Being unable to find an answer, I timidly ventured, "Is it all in that little book of yours?"

"Of course not. This is my manual of crystal gazing. Unscrew that electric bulb for me, will you? Thanks."

Cupping his hooves about the fragile glass, he peered intently into it as I gazed over his shoulder. And remarkably, the surface began to cloud; a mist obscured its center. Slowly, slowly, the haze lifted until we could distinguish houses, then trees, and finally, human figures. We looked into a new world, a world of chromium and glass that gleamed in the sun of the year 1962.

But strange anachronism! Plodding down the glass-paved street, a mangy horse sullenly pulled a bright red merry-go-round before a throng of laughing, singing children. Two attendants in the uniforms of Bulgarian Field Marshals sat in the driver's box, while another was busily engaged in currycombing the wooden horses. The faces of the three were strangely familiar. Were not the two in front Leonard Sternberg and Jules Weiner, and was not the groom Oscar Brand?

"What's Brand doing there?" I gasped.

"Shhh," whispered Oscar from within the glass. "It's just a hobby to me."

Reining up at the side of the street, Sternberg dismounted and slowly began to grind out "The Last Rose of Summer" on his barrel organ as Jules attempted to entice the children to part with their pennies.

"Ladies and Gentlemen, you see before you the most modern, the most scientific practicalization of the principle and of the law of centrifugal force," he barked, "and you are offered a chance to ride for two minutes, yes, I repeat, for one hundred and twenty seconds, for only one cent. And yet you hesitate? Why, it has been calculated that . . ."

* * * * *

Walking down the street strutted Mr. Thomas Bennett, successful manufacturer of "Bennett's Collapsible Collars (Guaranteed to fold up like opera hats when not in use)," followed by Theodore Goodchild, his star salesman, who carried a small brief case. As Mr. Bennett stopped to watch the merry-go-round, Goodchild inserted a cigar between the former's lips with a dexterity developed through constant practice, and, lighting it, dropped the extinguished matchstick into his souvenir case.

In the gutter near them knelt two muddy urchins, playing jacks with golden Phi Beta Kappa keys. "Those are Herbert King and Charlotte Feldman," remarked the donkey, speaking for the first time. "They got off to a fine start, but their mental ages mounted up so rapidly that they're in their second childhood."

Not far from the two precocious kiddies, three long haired, temperamental looking fellows squatted in the middle of the sidewalk drawing straws out of a small haystack which had been neatly painted on the concrete in yellow chalk.

With a fierce exultant yell, Lindsay Gresham leaped into the air, sneering at Arthur Pankin and Frank Eifert who remained seated on the sidewalk, expressions of hopeless despair on their countenances. Having drawn the longest straw, (it was fully forty three feet in length, and he had two aces up his sleeve which he didn't use) Lindsay was elected to do an artistic job. With the Gresham finesse, he proceeded to carefully post, using brush and glue pot, a gaudily colored poster bearing the picture of Miss Betty Middleton, advertising "Greco's Grand Griddle-cake Gruel . . . Good for What Ails You!"

"I agree with you perfectly," said the donkey, watching my facial contortions. "Perhaps you'd like to see where that slogan came from."

Again the crystal clouded, only to clear up on a different scene. The impressively lettered glass door of a high-up skyscraper office informed all and sundry that the offices of "Cohen's Certified Campaign Slogans—Norman G. Cohen, Pres." were about to be entered.

Inside, the President of the company was in earnest conference with Richard Harmel, gubernatorial candidate, who, together with his campaign manager, Quentin Stodola, was beseeching N. G. C. to produce half a dozen or so winning slogans. Suddenly Normie turned and shouted, "Sssh! I've got one!" Then he dictated to his secretary, Miss Bernice Greenberg, the following masterpiece, which she took down in shorthand. "Vote for Harmel—99.44/100% pure, he satisfies—ask the man who knows him."

A moving shadow could be seen passing the glass door at regular intervals. Robert Bass paced to and fro, carrying on his back a sign bearing the legend, "Do not patronize this establishment. It refuses to employ Union Strikebreakers. Local 379."

Deep in the bowels of the building, at the night club, "Ritzy Rendezvous Napoléon," smiling Bea Frohman held sway. Acting as mistress of ceremonies, she introduced Bill Hirsch to the audience. His act, greeted with hearty enthusiasm, was an imitation of Tarzan. Next Bea heralded the arrival of Marion Weinstein, famed monologist and mimic. Marion gave her impression of Tarzan imitating Bill imitating Tarzan.

A large chocolate bar, hurtling through the air at terrific speed, disrupted the scene. At opposite corners of the room stood Edwin Potterton and Allan Nanes candy vendors, and salesmen for the "Tribune" and "Times" respectively. They were throwing candy and adjectives at each other in a battle for the concession rights of the night club. Miss Frohman, used to the daily occurrence, ordered the doorman, Stanley Rothstein, to chase them both into the street. There they stayed on opposite corners, continuing the barrage of abuse and peppermint drops.

Across the way, however, an enormous crowd, entirely feminine, had quickly gathered before Papernow's Radio Shoppe, around the latest demonstration model of the Tannenbaum Televisor, as the announcer of Station WZEH had just presented "that ever popular crooner, Herbie Fوسفeld." Male pedestrians viewed the crowd with unconcealed disgust.

Next door stood a tall office building above whose doors was emblazoned the legend—"THE MORONOGRAPHIC — THE PICTURE NEWSPAPER FOR PEOPLE WHO CAN'T THINK." The donkey made a pass, muttered a few words under his breath, and swish, we were looking into the editorial offices of the tabloid.

Behind a littered desk which bore the sign, "Editor," sat a tall, executive-looking woman, Marcia Heatter. "Treasurer! Treasurer!" she called, sending Office Boy Dwight Allen scurrying until he returned with Helen Howard, who carried a cash box in her hands.

"How much did we take in last week?", Marcia demanded.

Miss Howard peered within the box. "Three cents, net," she reported brightly.

"Three cents! three cents!", shrieked Miss Heatter, depositing handfuls of her hair in a neat pile on the side of her desk. "We'll go bankrupt!"

"Oh, I don't know. A few cents here, a few cents there; it all mounts up." Miss Howard sounded a note of cheer.

* * * * *

Behind a battery of typewriters in the center of the adjoining room, Reporters Alvin Wormser and William Hyman tapped out the story of the one hundred and seventy-fifth anniversary ceremonies of Erasmus Hall High School, muttering, "Who, when, where, what, why" under their breath:

"Brooklyn, N. Y.—Wednesday, June 13—Among the notables present at the ceremonies marking the one hundred and seventy-fifth anniversary of Erasmus Hall High School, founded in 1787 by the good Dutch burghers of Flatbush were many prominent alumni, including U. S. Secretary of War Alla Shainin, Secretary of Labor Elaine Pear, and Secretary of Secretaries Arline Brown. Also present were the heads of the Latin, History, and Physical Training Departments, Drs. Robert Levine, Albert Small, Irwin Fine, and Honorary G. O. President Jerome Blumberg, all former students.

"Swimming Coach Louis Silverstone, commenting on his team's record of twelve national and three Olympic titles, explained that while he had never learned how to swim himself, he had absorbed so much good advice that he had become one of the most successful coaches in the country."

Near Al and Willie sat that well known author of popular fiction, Miss Dorothy Gottlieb, vociferously dictating her daily "true" story into a dictaphone, the wax of whose record was rapidly melting and dripping to the floor to form large red hearts.

In the Sports Department, Sports Editor Fred Powers directed Reporter Charles David to write a forecast of the coming World Series between the Dodgers, managed by David Silverstone, and the Yankees, who, though it was still in the middle of June, had mathematically "sewed up" the series. But it was no use. David sat still at his desk, a silly grin splitting his dazed face, as he repeated the percentages over and over again to himself. "Dodgers .998, Giants .062, Dodgers .998, Giants .062." . . .

"Call Dr. Holleb!" barked Powers to the ubiquitous Allen. "Quick! it's urgent!"

Within a few seconds Dr. Holleb appeared with his little brown bag. (He had nearly been expelled from Medical School for radical tendencies when he refused to carry a black bag). Taking one look at David, he made a rapid diagnosis. "Dodgeritis," he snapped. "Too bad but it's hopeless. He's beyond the aid of medical science."

Irwin Wexner and Feenie Katz, dramatic critics of the MORONOGRAPHIC, arose from their desks to borrow a cent from Miss Howard, tossing it to determine whether to award eight or nine stars to Morton Schoenfeld's new play, "The Chop-house," or "Six Beans for Five Cents," produced by Morton Feinman.

"The entire cast was well chosen, well balanced, and well directed, but to our minds, the outstanding performances were given by Milton Waldbaum, Muriel Goodman, Ruth Sacks, Morton Gottlieb, Ray Frisch, and Frank Scharfstein, who enacted the difficult roles of the six oven baked beans, playing three acts completely covered with tomato sauce . . ."

* * * * *

Into this scene of peaceful industry, however, strode a disturbing factor, the publisher of the MORONOGRAPHIC, Leo Bogart himself. Twirling his long waxed moustaches, he shouted, "Where's my editorial writer?"

"Heah, sir," called Bill Dorman, employing his telephone English accent.

"Write me an editorial against something," snapped Bogart, "and use plenty of capitals."

"About what, sir?"

"I don't care what."

"I cahn't write without knowing what, sir."

"What!"

"What's the mattah?"

"What do you mean?"

"About what?"

"What is it?"

"What about what?"

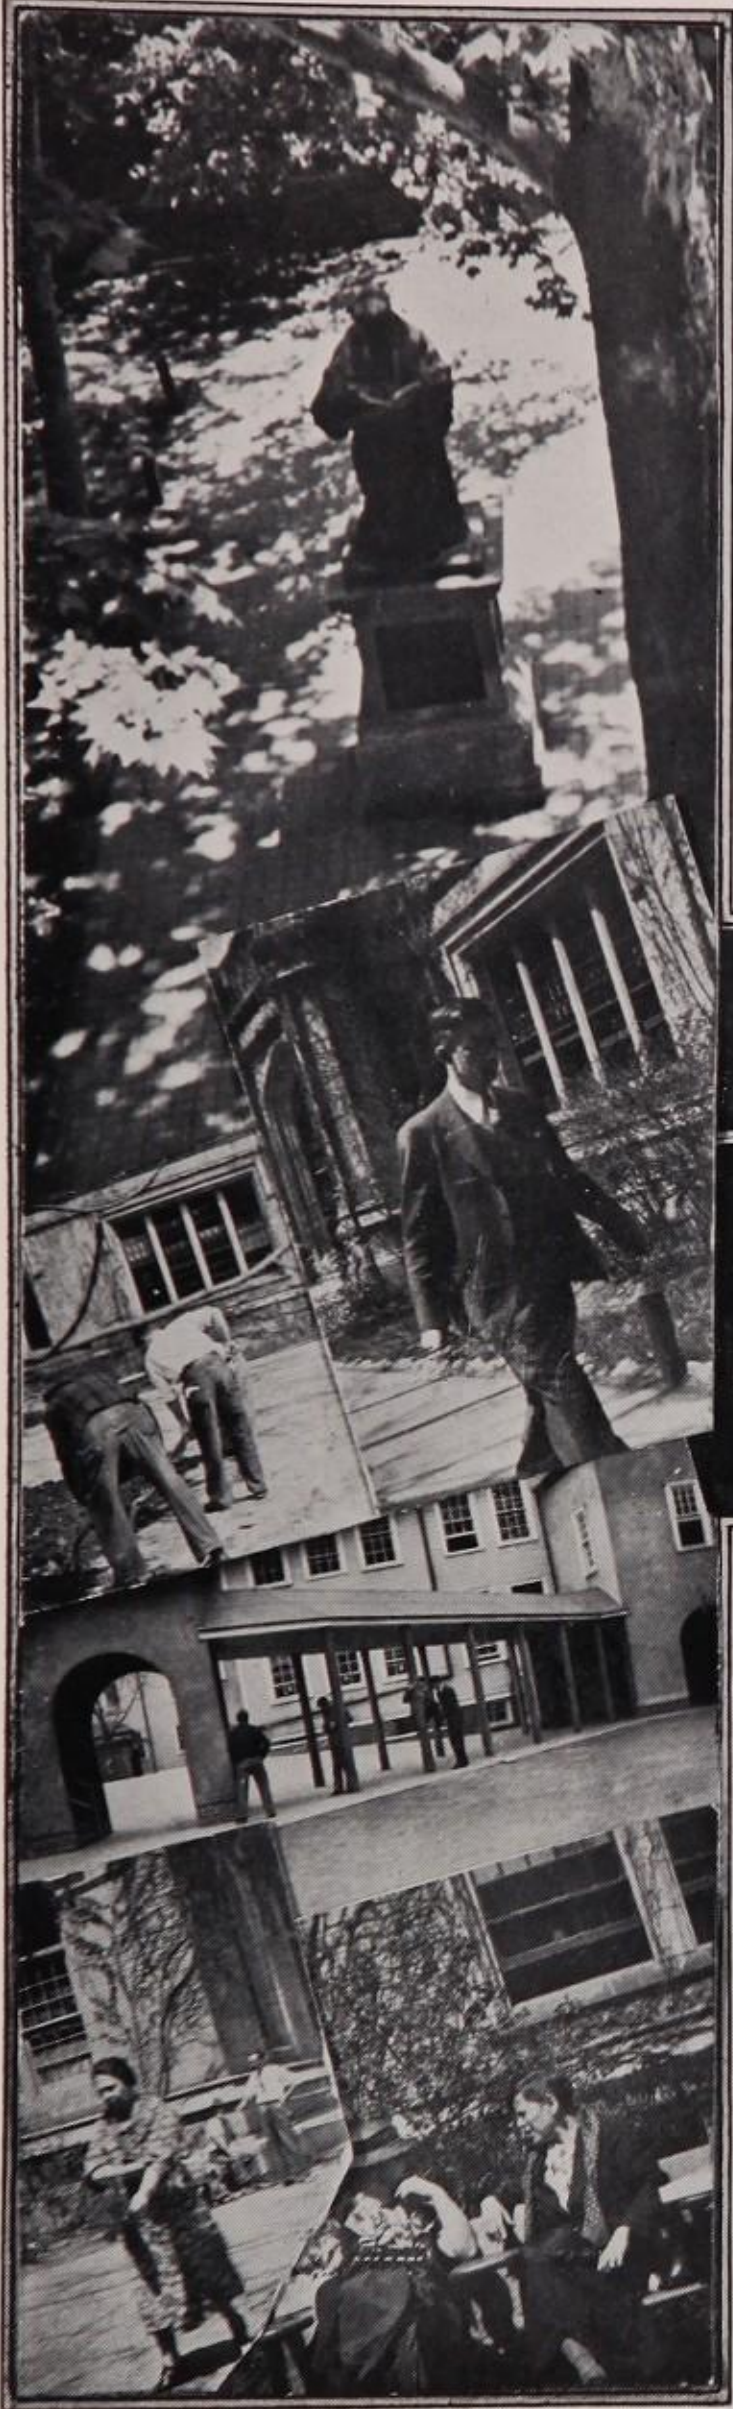

"Wh . . ."

With a loud pop, the bulb had exploded in our faces. "It was only a ten watt bulb," remarked the donkey, pensively tossing the base at a passing senior.

John H. Bennett.

Last Will and Testament

We, the class of JUNE, 1937, being all of sound and disposing mind and memory, and although considering the uncertainty of our graduation, do make, publish and declare this to be our last Will and Testament as follows, hereby revoking all other and former wills by us at any time made.

To Mr. Zimmermann, with no attempt at matchmaking, we bequeath faithful Arabella, who has served Josie Erasmus in her home nursing classes for almost thirty years. We sincerely hope that she will soon receive her pension, which she justly deserves, and will settle down to a quiet domestic life.

To Miss Berg's delightful little charges, we leave the outstanding discovery of our senior year, the method of acquiring a deep monotone voice in order to throw all those near you in Senior Singing off key.

To all Freshmen, now and forever, we joyfully bequeath the secret passage beneath the Old Building to get lost in.

To all students of the classics we leave a stable full of Latin ponies, complete with enough mistakes to fool all suspecting teachers.

To the Math. Dept., together with steaming cups of Major Bowes, we leave 22/7 for pie.

To our successors we bequeath our pictures, so that in years to come, some doting child may recognize his grandfather as the third blur in the fourth row.

To the select few who will enjoy it, we leave the esoteric joy of scaling paper pie plates past the necks of Service Squadders in the lunch room, a technique acquired by but few.

To all aspiring Dutchman reporters we leave a bound volume of all the old Dutchman issues, so that they may continue the cycle of recopied "Dutchmania" humor.

We cannot pass on without making mention of our loyal Desiderius who has pondered for years in his turbulent mind about our queer mode of living. To him, as a token of our undying affection, we bequeath a pair of eyeglasses, to prevent or cure eyestrain, astigmatism, or myopia.

Last, but most important to our teachers, we leave.

In Witness Whereof, We have hereunto subscribed our names, and affixed our seal, The THIRTIETH day of JUNE in the year ONE THOUSAND NINE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SEVEN.

THE CLASS OF JUNE, 1937

Witnesses:

PETER J. COUBLE

DESIDERIUS ERASMUS ROTERODAMUS

F A R E W E L L

There's a lull fall'n o'er the campus
And the music of the trees
Is a song of four year's making,
Causing pleasant reveries.
For it's June beneath the chestnuts,
And the leaves recount a past
Of delightful, precious hours
Which too quickly fled our grasp.

Our Erasmus, Alma Mater,
May you ever highest reign,
May the echoes of our laughter
Always in your halls remain;
May the campus breezes whisper
And the trees forever tell
Of our joyous years together
And our lingering . . . farewell.

Opportunities for High School Graduates

There are more opportunities for employment in the field of business today than in any other profession. Many high school principals advise students who have no definite plans to take business courses.

Rhodes School offers courses leading to Secretarial, Accounting, and Executive positions in business. Time required depends upon course selected and previous education. High School commercial course graduates complete advanced training quickly and are entitled to employment assistance.
